IDENTIFYING FILES OF VIRTUAL MACHINE

- vmware.vmx
- vmware.vmxf
- vmware.vmdk
- vmware-flat.vmdk
- vmware.nvram
- vmware.vmsd
- vmware.vmss
- vmware.vmsn
- vmware.vswp
- vmware.vmtm
- vmware.log
- vmware-#.log
- vmware.scoreboard

IDENTIFYING FILES OF VIRTUAL MACHINE

- vmware.vmx
  - This file is primary configuration file, which store setting or configuration is choose by you for your virtual machine.
- vmware.vmxf
  - This file is additional virtual machine configuration file that is in a team. Note:- vmware.vmxf file remains if virtual machine is removed from team.
- vmware.vmdk
  - This file is a virtual disk file, which stores the contents of virtual machine.
- vmware-flat.vmdk
  - This file is preallocated virtual disk file.
- vmware.nvram
  - This file store the state of virtual machine's BIOS or EFI configuration.
- vmware.vmsd
  - This file is a centralized file for storing information and metadata about virtual machine snapshots.

IDENTIFYING FILES OF VIRTUAL MACHINE

- vmware.vmsn
  - This is the snapshot state file, which stores the running state of a virtual machine.
- vmware.vmss
  - This file contain the suspended state of virtual machine. Some earlier VMware product use the extension vmware .std for suspended state.
- vmware.vswp
  - This is virtual machine swap file.
- vmware.vmtm
  - This is the configuration file contain team data.
- vmware.log
  - This is the file that keeps a log of key VMware Workstation activity. This file can be useful in troubleshooting if you encounter problems. This file stored in directory that hold the configuration file vmware.vmx, this file contain current virtual machine log file.
- vmware-#.log
  - This file contain old virtual machine log entries.